CHECKING OF BAGGAGE.

Receives Kicks and Marks Through Every Channel of Passage.

The American constitution has been called a system of checks. So in American life. When you want to travel you give your baggage to the porter of your hotel and he gives you a check in return. At the station you reclaim it with the check and pass it in at the counter and receive another check. As you approach your destination another functionary comes along, the train, takes your check and gives you another check in its place. He fishes out your baggage and conveys it to your hotel for a consideration. You have left your third and last check at the office of the hotel when you enter it, and thence it is delivered upon your receipt of the baggage.

At first you bless the arrangement as the salvation of the traveler. After a few weeks of it the tyranny of the check becomes so galling that you begin to long for the good old English method of dumping down your goods in front of a porter and leaving them to find the way themselves. You would even hail it as a personal triumph if some of your baggage would get lost. But it never does. Sometimes it arrives late, but it always arrives.

Yet it seldom arrives in the shape in which it started, if that is any consolation. They who have to do with the baggage see to that. You will soon discover why Americans carry their goods in ironclad trunks, and why it is madness for anybody to anything else. I started out, like an idiot, with a new leather portmanteau. They ripped the stout brass lock off the first week—not for plunder, apparently, but simply because it is the tradition of the service. They punched it and kicked and danced on it. In softer hours, when literary inspiration came, they wrote on it. My portmanteau to-day is an epitome of the political sentiment of the United States from New York to San Francisco. As a historical document it is beyond price, and I am contemplating the gift of it to the library of congress at Washington. As a portmanteau it has both feet in the grave.

The system of checks is not confined to travelers' luggage. The conductor of the train passes carelessly to and fro asking for your ticket and giving you a check in return, or asking for your check and returning your ticket. If you hand your stick to a boy in a hotel while you write your name in the register he dashes off to stow it away in some secret place and returns triumphant with a check. In the very hotel bar, when you buy seven pence ha-porth of whisky you get a check—San Francisco Call.

On Dr. Koondyke.

Many a man will protect his money at the risk of his life. Thousands decline to protect their lives because it would require the sacrifice of a few dollars of their money. This seems almost incredible but it is true. Men, (feel of mankind, consumption, is slowly but swiftly creeping upon them. But in the mad race for money they refuse to stop and drive off the dread disease. It would require a sacrifice of both time and money and so they neglect it, until it is too late. There is no excuse for this. A sure and quick remedy is at hand. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures 98 per cent of all cases of consumption. It remedies all disorders of the digestion. It invigorates the liver. It makes new rich blood and builds up firm healthy flesh. It enters the blood and drives out all impurities, and acts directly upon the lungs driving out all disease germs. It builds sound vital tissue in the lungs. Thousands have testified to their cure by this wonderful remedy after they were given up by the doctors and all hope was gone. Druggists sell it.

I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and can and do recommend it every place I go," writes Mrs. J. Dr. Graves, of Salem, California Co., N. Y. (Academy Street). I am a traveling saleslady and have been for eighteen years. When I find people who are afflicted I tell them what Dr. Pierce's medicine has done for me. Twelve years ago I was given up to die. I had what all my physicians called consumption. I had hemorrhage of the lungs, night-sweats, and in fact I fully realized my condition. I begged of them to let me try the "Golden Medical Discovery," and the result is, I still live and do lots of hard work.

Dr. Pierce's It is better to do mending while the damage is slight, than wait until the whole structure is ready to fall. Constipation is the one, all-embracing disorder that is responsible for many other diseases. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. Druggists sell them. They never gripe. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. Nothing else is just as good. A permanent cure. Pellets.

THE MONETARY COMMISSION.

President McKinley sent three commissioners to Europe at an expense to the people of $100,000 to get England and other nations to send delegates to an international monetary convention, to discuss the question of remonetizing silver. Near the close of the special session of Congress he sent a message to Congress recommending the passage of a bill to authorize the President to appoint a commission to prepare a bill to place the monetary system of the United States on a gold basis permanently, and to appropriate $100,000 to defray the expenses of the commission. The Senate failed to pass the bill, and Chairman Hanna, of the Indianapolis gold convention, and the agents of the European money lenders in this country have undertaken to do what the Senate refused to do, though recommended by the President. Mr. Hanna has selected what the gold papers are pleased to designate "a non-partisan commission" to draft a bill for Congress. This commission consists of the following named persons:

George F. Edmunds, ex-Senator from Vermont; Charles S. Fairchild, ex-Secretary of the Treasury; Stewart Patterson of Philadelphia, who was chairman of a local gold conference; J. W. Fries, the head of the great cotton industry that bears his name; T. G. Bush, president of the Mobile & Birmingham Railroad; George E. Leighton of St. Louis, a retired manufacturer; W. B. Dean of St. Paul, wholesale hardware merchant; R. S. Taylor of Fort Wayne, lawyer; Louis Garnett of San Francisco, capitalist; Professor L. J. Laughlin of the Chicago University, a henchman of "Standard Oil" Rockefeller, and Stuyvesant Fish of New York, President of the Illinois Central Railroad.

Six of these gentlemen are Republicans and five are Democrats in name, but all of them are gold men. The five Democrats, so-called, opposed Bryan in the last campaign and most likely voted direct for McKinley, and are now classed as Democrats for deceptive purposes only. There is not a bimetalist in the whole lot, yet the gold men with brazen effrontery assert that the commission is non-partisan.

Who but an idiot or a pie-counter Republican professes to believe that a commission composed exclusively of pronounced gold men will do anything for silver? That commission will doubtless draft a bill to retire greenbacks and give the national banks exclusive authority to issue paper money and that bill will be railroaded through the House of Representatives under gag rule by direction of Mr. Reed, who is dictator of that body.

WHAT MAY BE EXPECTED.

It is thought that in October, when the elections in Ohio and other States are near at hand, another report will be sent out that England has agreed to send delegates to an international monetary conference, so as to help out Hanna and other goldbug Senators by fooling the people and making them believe that the Republican party is a friend of silver. The Silver Knight anticipates such manipulation, but does not believe the people will be caught in such a trap. Even if a conference is held the English delegates will be instructed to hold out for the gold standard first, last and all the time, and which ever way England goes so will go the conference.

Mrs. CHARLOTTE SMITH of Massachusetts is vigorously prosecuting her crusade against bachelors who are seeking office. She asserts that the demoralization of labor and the decrease in wages is principally due to unmarried women being forced to earn their own livelihood, and she insists on opposing every bachelor who offers himself for office, and earnestly asks the assistance of every public spirited citizen in defeating such candidates. The main ground of her contention, improvement in morals and wages, appeals to every citizen who has the welfare of the country at heart.

Mrs. JANE L. STANFORD, the widow of late Senator Stanford, has been called upon to pay seven legacies of $100,000 each to nephews and nieces of the Senator. She petitioned the probate court for permission to distribute real estate among them, but the court held that the testator intended that the legacies should be paid in cash, and so ordered.

The Election Commissioners have called a special election to be held in San Francisco December 14th for the selection of fifteen freeholders to draft a new charter for the city. The people of San Francisco are determined to have better and cheaper government if it takes a new charter to secure those desirable objects.

The association of wholesale and retail liquor dealers of San Francisco has petitioned the Board of Supervisors to increase the liquor license from $20 to $500. It is thought the high license will decrease the number of saloons about one-half and increase the business of the other half.

The Southern Pacific has reduced freight rates between Fresno and Visalia to conform with the cut made by the new Valley road.

A Rare Musical Treat.
The Elkhart (Ind.) Truth has the following to say concerning the Walther-Hext combination, which will appear at the Opera House Friday evening, October 1st:

The Hext Concert Company opened the season for the Elkhart Lecture Association at the Bucklen Opera House last evening, and as predicted gave an entertainment that was highly satisfactory and pleasing to the large and representative audience.

Herr Carl Walther proved himself a master of the violin, producing some beautiful, sweet, but at the same time highly classical music which was not only pleasing to the audience but displayed an artistic talent rarely equalled. Herr Walther played several selections and on each occasion received an enthusiastic encore.

To Effie Elaine Hext too much praise could not be given. Her part of the program was filled with the greatest of skill and talent. She has an excellent voice which has been highly cultivated and is always under full control of the possessor.

In her recitals she brought out in the most vivid manner the pathos and sweetness which was characteristic of the different pieces. Her portrayal of the different scenes and characters of Shakespeare's greatest plays were perfect and show careful study combined with the natural ability of a talented actress. Her efforts in these scenes were received with rapturous applause.

MONEY IN MOLLUSKS.

Catching Scallops on the Massachusetts Coast

An Industry That Has Grown Extensively in the Last Few Years—Some Interesting Particulars.

Just before the last visitors leave the seaside places where scallops abound they see men cleaning down the large sloops and fishing boats, scraping the bottoms and overhauling sails and running rigging, and, if curious enough to ask the reason why, they are told that the scallop season commences on October 1. This has been the date for years, with the exception of 1894, when the Massachusetts season was delayed until November 1, owing to the growing scarcity of the mollusk and the change in the season, which gives warmer weather, as a rule, at the end of September and in October than was the case years ago. As a matter of fact, scallops, like celery, are not in their prime until the frost catches them.

The great bulk of the early scallops in the New York market comes from Shelter Island and Peconic bay, where visitors in summer may see them lying, shells and fish-mingled, by hundreds of thousands in five feet of shoaling water. There are many more empty shells than full ones, say the fishermen, and this is proved to some extent if the visitors dredge for the handsome fan-shaped shells to use in fancy work. They seldom get a shell with the meat still in it. Later on scallops come to this market from Buzzard's bay, Monument beach, up to Wing's Neck Light, in Massachusetts, and still later the eastern supply arrives from Maine and New Hampshire. This year the early shipments come from Huntington, Smithtown and Brookhaven, L. I., and scallops from the Connecticut coast will be coming in next week. The prices vary from two dollars a gallon to twenty-five cents. At present, while the supply is limited, prices will be very fluctuating. On October 1 the price was one dollar, and October 2 it was $1.50 in the market.

The industry is not a very old one, it being about twenty-five years since it assumed large proportions. As in the case of oysters, people had scallops at their doors, but did not care to take the trouble to gather them to eat, much less try to market them. Four years ago the United States government evinced an interest in the industry, and obtained statistics of receipts at the various markets for a term of years.

The scallops are taken from the water at the various points by dredging from the sides of sloops and smaller boats. The dredge consists of an iron frame holding about a bushel, with a coarse network of iron rings at the back, like an oyster dredge. It is drawn slowly over the scallop grounds until it is filled, when the catch is hauled aboard, the hauling process commences, and the refuse is thrown overboard. Some of the larger boats put out on a good day as many as seven dredges. A good day is estimated to produce about thirty bushels in the shell and the thirty bushels in the shell will produce about ninety quarts for the market. The "eye" of the mollusk is the only part retained. Opening the shells in cold weather is bitter hard work, and the men get every cent they make. The shells are, however, fairly easy to open, and for this reason it is no uncommon thing for men who own skiffs to take their entire catch home, where their wives and children all turn out to help shell them. The shells have sharp edges, which make most of the men wear rubber finger cots. The knife used is of steel, with a blade an inch wide and nearly three times as long. A good opener can get through with 12 gallons a day, and the pay is 25 cents a gallon. The small scallops are thrown overboard.

It is practically impossible to get scallops in their natural state in the New York markets. They are all soaked before leaving the dredgers, the idea being to make them larger and whiter. By soaking three gallons of scallops they can be made to measure four gallons, but the effect of the process on the quality is another matter. Any visitor who has bought them at the grounds knows the difference between the soaked and the unsoaked. Directly the soaked scallops are cooked they flood the pan with water, and drive many a good housewife's soul into sin by chilling the fat in which she intended to cook them. Many a time she will dry them carefully, cracker dust and egg them, have the fat boiling and bubbling, only to drop them in and have them come out parboiled, or parstewed. The failure is due to the water's being tried out of them.

The scallop is a short-lived mollusk, coming to maturity and dissolution in two years in its natural element, and dying in two days when removed. Scallops are very uncertain in their movements, and the supply is therefore precarious, winds and tides or any change of currents affecting their numbers strongly, and sometimes entirely clearing them out of places where they have been very prolific. The yield this year is expected to be fully up to the average. The American scallops are easily the finest in the world, although the fish has been known favorably for centuries, the larger Mediterranean variety having been worn centuries ago in the hats of pilgrims.—N. Y. Sun.

A Klondike Miner Returns to Find His Wife Breathing Her Last.

One of the saddest stories born of events connected with the Klondike gold discoveries is that of John Alberson, of Nortonville, 12 miles west of Atchison, Kan. Mr. Alberson was a carpenter. In the fall of 1894 the family consisted of husband, wife and two children. The two children died of scarlet fever in quick succession. Work became scarce in his neighborhood, and after providing as well as possible for the comfort of his wife, Mr. Alberson started west in search of employment. He finally reached Seattle in 1895 and from there drifted to the Klondike regions. He wrote to his wife apprising her of his contemplated Alaskan journey. He told her that it would possibly be a long time before she would hear from him again, but had her be of good cheer, and, as he was in good health, hopeful and confident, predicted a happy reunion would eventually follow their long, enforced separation.

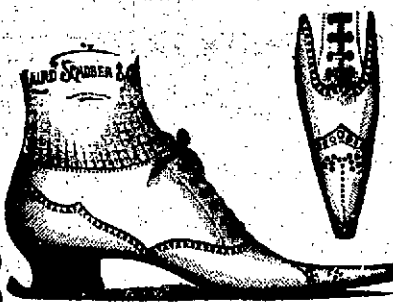

During the time Mr. Alberson was at Klondike he had but one opportunity to write to his wife. The letter, which told of his good health, notwithstanding many hardships and privations, and of the fact that he was doing well and would have a competency by the spring of 1897, when he would return home, was intrusted to a returning miner. The miner met with many obstacles on his homeward journey, and was delayed at many places, so that the letter was not mailed until May of the present year. It was a message of glad tidings and of great joy to the lonely wife. During the husband's long absence she had a severe struggle and finally sickened. Had it not been for kind neighbors, she would have become a public charge.

John Alberson was among the first of the returning miners to reach San Francisco. There he speedily converted his gold dust and nuggets, about $12,000, into bank drafts and greenbacks, and purchased a ticket for the first east-bound train. Just before he started on his homeward trip he telegraphed his wife of his safe arrival in San Francisco, of his good health and good fortune, and that in a few days they would be reunited. At several stations he telegraphed her of his progress toward home and wife. His last message was from Topeka, only 40 miles from home. The dispatch read like this: "Will be home at supper. Kill the fatted calf."

John Alberson reached the Nortonville depot just at the close of day. Without casting a glance at those upon the platform and without being recognized in the twilight by anyone, he hurried down the street to his home. He was met at the door by a neighbor woman, who pointed to a bed within a room. There lay his wife, pale and wan and already within the shadow of death. Their eyes met in mutual recognition for a moment. There was one brief embrace, and when John Alberson once more lifted his head and looked upon the face of his wife she was dead.

A young lawyer talked four hours to an Indiana jury, who felt like lynching him. His opponent, a grizzled old professional, arose, looked sweetly at the Judge, and said: "Your honor, I will follow the example of my young friend who has just finished, and submit the case without argument." PROSPERITY.

What It Consists of, How Gained, and Where Found.

(Conditions necessary by C. D. Van Duser.)

Upon prosperity depends the success or failure of the Republican party. As a guarantee of victory the Republican party promised the American people prosperity. A consideration of prosperity either temporary or permanent is essential just now to determine whether or not it exists and just how far the Republican party is responsible for it. The bettering of the social, industrial and financial conditions of the American people, the equalizing of burdens, the protection of labor, the staying of falling prices, the guaranteeing of higher prices for farm products are among the essential conditions of prosperity. The touching into new life of the channels of trade and commerce are the results of prosperity. The question arises at once, in how far has the Republican party been able to bring about these conditions and can she ever do it. Does prosperity exist? If so to what causes attributable? Upon what does the Republican party predicate prosperity? These are questions which need answering. A brief answer can be given to each. Prosperity does not exist as yet. It can never be brought about by means which the Republican party is employing. The Republican party points to the Dingley bill as a prosperity measure. Now let us examine into the true condition of affairs.

By facts and observations I wish to combat two propositions, namely, first: That prosperity exists. Second: That it can never arise from the Dingley trust law.

WHO SHALL DETERMINE?

Thos. B. Reed in a letter to the New York World a few days ago attempted and from his standpoint did define and explain prosperity. The point of view is clearly very essential. As a successful politician and skilled parliamentarian, Mr. Reed enjoying a salary of $8,000 a year may have an entirely different view of prosperity from the thousands of wage earners struggling for sustenance or the thousands of farmers attempting to lift mortgages from their farms.

The World announces prosperity because stock value have arisen. Sugar, whiskey, gas and other trust combinations have seen values rise with rapidity.

The World takes an entirely different view—paid as it is to shout prosperity—from the miners of Pennsylvania for instance on starvation wages. Havermeyer announces prosperity because Congress legislated him $15,000,000 worth of protection. J. Pierpont Morgan announces prosperity because in collusion with the Government he made $12,000,000 in a bond issue.

The Metropolitan Press paid to do it, Bradstreet and Dunn whose interests are to color it, Hanna and the Republican party who desire it, the trusts benefited by McKinley and Dingley, who would have us believe it, are not the parties to whom we must look for the truth regarding prosperity.

It is to be admitted beyond doubt that men who speculate in stock, who took advantage of the sugar boom, some Senators, also, the millionaires who benefited by the corner in wheat, the great trusts benefited by the Dingley Bill are enjoying prosperity. Prosperity is always more or less existent among wealthy people. When hard times strikes capital all they have to do is to force a bond issue so their idle millions can be invested in coupon bonds or taking advantage of an election, force a tariff law to give more monopolies protection.

This class constitute about one per cent of the people. How about the other ninety-nine per cent. What is their testimony. Let us go into the factory and talk with sad faced women and care worn men, working on half time at starvation wages. Let us go among the New England farmers whose dismantled farms and exhausted soil furnish a mere existence. Let us go among the miners of Pennsylvania and find out how they prosper. The testimony of these men must settle the question of prosperity. Mr. Reed has nothing to say about them. The New York World has not sent its men into those fields. It would give the lie to the prophecies emanating from the White House and from Wall Street. Have wages risen? No. Except where armed miners have forced it at the point of death. This is not like unto the wisdom of the Republican party. The afflicted thousands of Europe where ghastly and stalking famine abroad has forced wheat up. In order to claim any credit in this direction the Republican party must confess itself the instigator of famine. They will hardly do that.

As the recipient of prosperity the people can be classified into the creditor classes, such as bankers and bondholders living upon the interest of their incomes, into the salaried classes, into the wage earners and into farmers. Now the first class constitute about one per cent of the people. Their prosperity cannot be taken for the prosperity of the whole. The salaried classes form about ten per cent. They are seldom affected by good or bad times. The ninety per cent constitute the wage earners and the farmers.

If prosperity means as the Republican party claims, plenty of work and high prices, they have failed. Work is as hard to obtain as ever and the only raise in prices is to the consumer who has to pay for what the importer and manufacturer profits by. Sugar has risen—as a result of the Dingley bill. It costs us more to build a house as a result of the Dingley bill, but wages have not risen nor has the opportunity for work become more abundant. The Dingley bill enables the manufacturer to give better wages, but he does not do it. Herein lies the failure of the Republican party to give prosperity.

We have Wm. McKinley as President, we have on our statute books a Dingley bill, but McKinley and his trust system of protection, Hanna with his corruption, Sherman and Gage with all their financiering can never continue a system which shall or can give us prosperity clinging as they do to a gold standard which means falling prices, falling labor and commercial ruin. It nullifies protection. The only way to make a political party effectual is to link it with silver.

However McKinleyism, which reached its most vicious form in the Dingley bill, is as fatal to prosperity as a gold standard. It is the child of the gold standard; they are the living offspring of the Republican party. The Republican party promised prosperity to all—they gave it to the wealthy few. They promised us higher prices for what we produced, but gave us higher prices for what we consumed. They promised us higher wages, but gave it to high salaried officials; they promised us more labor, yet the millions are still idle.

The system is wrong. We must turn for relief to other remedies. The coming Silver Democracy which shall give us a protection for the poor as well as the rich man, for our raw material as well as the manufactured product, which thus enables American labor to hold its head up; a protective policy giving sufficient revenue to run the Government, yet such as to enrich the trusts—a true American tariff moderate and just, linked with its companion silver, which shall stay falling prices, support labor and make free independent American citizens proud of our nation, jealous of our glory, and give us a true prosperity which shall enable the millionaires to get a legitimate return for his investment and yet enable the poor man to live in comfort, with a money possessing as great a purchasing power as a debt paying power is the system which the silver men slowly alligating under one banner shall give the American people. Its promise is universal prosperity, not class prosperity.

THE CARSON FAIR.

The First Day Opens Under Favorable Conditions.

The first day of the Carson Fair opened yesterday under the favorable circumstances of good weather, a large attendance and a good program. Everything pointed to a good week's sport yesterday, and it is believed that there will be no disappointment.

The pugilistic arena at the track has been arranged as a grand stand and is quite a novelty, as many, especially the ladies, who could not attend that historic event, may, like the tourists who visit Rome, view the exact spot where at one time world-famed athletes met in combat.

The News says that the usual cry, "Peanuts," and "Popcorn," is heard, but the old chestnut of "Round she goes," is, like many of the old alliments of the racetrack, a thing of the past, as games of that character have been prohibited.

Before the first race it was announced that Jockey "Fizen" had been ruled off the track, last year, and was not only ruled off the track at the present time, but ordered outside of the enclosure.

Silver State won the half mile race, and the afternoon's sport closed with a trotting race.

Wednesday is announced as Reno Day and a special program has been arranged, covering bicycle contests of various kinds as well as the regular speed contests of runners.

An Extensive Business for Sale.

On account of various matters in which he is interested demanding so much of his attention, R. H. Cowles finds that he cannot devote the proper amount of time to his Grocery Business at Wadsworth and hereby announces he will sell the building at Wadsworth in which is located his General Merchandise Store, the lot on which it stands, a large fire-proof cellar, the stock of goods on hand, the good will, etc. The goods are all fresh, nothing shop worn. The business is a prosperous one and the only reason for selling is to enable Mr. Cowles to give all of his time to other industries in which he is engaged. Wadsworth is the best business town in Nevada to-day and this opening offers a splendid opportunity for some good man to locate in Wadsworth. Call on R. H. Cowles at his store. aug28mo1

LIFE IN THE POLAR SEAS.

Plenty of Bears, Birds and Narwhale—Millions of Fiddlers and Fleas.

It is evident, according to Nansen, that the waters of the polar seas are far from being deserted by living creatures, says the Journal des Debats. Whenever the sea is open, or partially so, seals, narwhals and birds abound, and on the heaps of ice near the edge of the water the bears are numerous. Under the ice marine animals are not wanting. The explorers found an abundance of little crustaceans, whose discovery was the result of an accident.

One day the cook sank a piece of meat in a hole which he had cut in the ice with a view of thawing it out. This is a method often resorted to for the purpose of sparing the fuel. Forty-eight hours afterward, while taking out the meat, the cook was astonished to find an immense number of little animals that dropped upon the surface of the ice and commenced to jump about like fleas. Nansen, who is a professor of zoology, had no trouble in recognizing those little crustaceans, which may be seen jumping in the sand, and which are called sand fleas. He was delighted at the discovery, because the creatures are good to eat, although they contain but little nourishment.

A few months later on, when in 78 or 80 degrees north latitude, in October, that is to say, at the beginning of the long winter night, he fished up in a little net with closed meshes a quantity of little crustaceans. This proves that life is by no means suspended under the ice; on the contrary, it is very active. In the mud of the bottom, where the water is shallow, there are numerous starfish, mollusks, worms, sponges, and several species of crustaceans.

GREECE'S MOTHERLY QUEEN.

Oiga's Simplicity of Taste Wins for Her the Love of the People.

The queen of Greece is looked upon as a mother. Simplicity in tastes and a kind disposition have won for her the name. She has never got over her own great sorrow—the death of her eldest daughter, Grand Duchess Paul, whose departure from Athens to be married was more like a funeral than the preface to a bridal. All Athens turned out to wish her joy. But the faces of the bride and her mother were blistered with tears. This being thought a bad omen, the air was filled with lamentation. The princess was entreated by the women to turn back and wait for some more propitious time to begin her journey. But the princess was married, and was killed in less than two years by a fall from a carriage that was going at a furious pace. A nurse of the princess dreamed the night before the departure for Russia that they were at the museum and came to sculpture representing a family group around a dying girl. The dreamer thought the personages very suddenly changed into the king, the queen herself and the betrothed princess. The next morning she told her dream to the queen, who laughed, but believed her, as her blistered face showed.

LATE VAGARIES OF FASHION.

A homespun wool material in a new weave, very loose and thin, like grenadine, is in the market. It comes in stripes and is made up over the inevitable taffeta silk lining.

Swiss embroidered muslin, of the finest kind is made up into dainty summer gowns over silk linings, and pretty figured lawns are ticked from the knee to the deep hem as they were years ago.

Transparent effects play a large part in summer millinery, and maul, chiffon, net and tulle are shodged into the prettiest shaped hats, with both lightness in color, and weight to recommend them to favor.

Lace is more in demand than ever, and the woman who has a lot of real old lace is to be envied. Yet the imitations are exquisitely fine, and the art of producing pretty effects with inexpensive lace is well known to the dressmakers.

Ribbon belts made of two lengths of ribbon folded and crossed on the hips so that they form points back and front are a useful accessory of dress, since they are boned and hooked in front, and consequently are always in place.

PERSONAL POINTS.

Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian novelist, is writing in England and the Scottish lakes this summer, on his way to the United States.

Slonkiewicz, the Polish novelist, has gone to Paris to consult a specialist about his throat. He is at work on a historical novel turning on the great defeat of the Teutonic knights on the Tannenberg, in 1410, by the Poles and Lithuanians under Wladislaw Jagello.

Hamilton W. Marble, the editor and essayist, is one of the numerous American wheelmen in England this summer. Mr. Marble sails this month for a long vacation and after a few weeks in London he expects to take a bicycle trip to the lake country—Oxford, Salisbury and Wales. His wife and daughter accompanying him.

Lord Wolseley is not likely to retain for any length of time his position as commander in chief of the British army. He is afflicted with cancer of the stomach and the disease is in a very advanced state. The doctors declare that his life may be prolonged until the end of the year. He will doubtless be succeeded by Lord Roberts, familiarly known as "Little Bobs" by Tommy Atkins, whose idol he is.

In her castle Patti has a photographic apparatus, and in this she frequently warbles. She occasionally lends the cylinders to her friends at a distance who have phonographs, that they may listen to her melodious strains.

A fat woman in bloomers was whirling on her wheel in a street near Kensington, England, when she was seen by a dancing bear belonging to an itinerant showman. The animal dashed at her and wrecked the bicycle, but the injury to the lady was not serious.

A queer-looking little Mexican dog, a pet of the late Alexander Herrmann, the magician, which for 12 years had accompanied him in his travels, died recently at Whitestone, L. I., and was ceremoniously buried in a costly casket lined with purple broadcloth.
